WHY Evaluate Teachers? First, teacher quality is positively linked with student learning. This is the primary reason to develop, implement, and continue our efforts to improve teacher evaluation systems. As a nation the US has historically struggled to come to a consensus about what constitutes "teacher quality" and how exactly to define it. By the 1970s teacher evaluation incorporated the now familiar "clinical supervision" model, a "multiphase process that required the supervisor and the teacher to plan, observe, analyze, and discuss the teacher's "professional practice." Modern-day teacher evaluation systems that emerged from this model continue to vary among the states, but most share a couple of common elements

INTRODUCTION. Involving teachers in the decision-making activities of a school have been seen as an important contributory factor, for the success of educational institutions (Atakpa & Ankomah, 1998). This claim was revealed in a study conducted by Atakpa & Ankomah (1998) when they stated that, we have two categories of basic schools in Ghana; efficiently managed basic schools and ineffectively managed basic schools. The effectively controlled schools have good headteachers wh

Currently, teacher supervision and evaluation systems vary greatly across the nation, particularly for tenured teachers, but the results of these diverse systems have been historically very similar. The 2009 publication The Widget Effect (Weisberg, Sexton, Mulhern, & Keeling, 2009), a study of teacher evaluation practices in 12 diverse districts in four states, found that over 99 percent of tenured teachers in districts using a satisfactory or unsatisfactory rating system earned a positive rating. The influential publication of The Widget Effect coupled with new federal incentives and requirements for states to revamp and improve teacher evaluation, including the enactment of federal "Race to the Top" grants in 2009 which encouraged states

Differentiated Supervision and Evaluation Plan. Pottsgrove School District. May 2013. Our Supervision and Evaluation Plan is designed to provide a forum for enhancing teacher quality and promoting continuous growth. Components of the plan begin with individual goal setting and progress through continuous inquiry, evidence gathering, feedback and self-reflection on research-based best practices to meet organizational goals in one of the following three formats: Direct Self-directed Collaborative It is critical that each individual meet standards of effective instructional practice. In the direct strand, new teachers will be afforded a high degree of support through Interpretating and making use of the data. Teacher supervision and Evaluation. Wide-lens Techniques. Previous evaluation methods included one or two classroom observations, using checklists, rating forms, and/or anecdotal records (Boyd, 1989; Loup, Garland, Ellett, & Rugutt, 1996). Teacher tenure and job security was once based on maintaining teacher certification and licensing with an occasional evaluation of classroom presentation and classroom management. Today, teacher evaluations are becoming a yearly requirement with rigorous goals to be met by the teacher and proof of student growth and achievement must be visible.
