Although not authentically "digital native", nevertheless as a generation of embryologists we have at our disposal a multitude of formidable information and communication technologies tools. The development of a web Atlas was therefore inescapable. Compared with the 2012 publication, the reader will find no novelty in the contents of the web Atlas in its initial version. This does not reflect lack of sensitivity of the web editors for the need of updated information. Rather, it ideally represents the start line for a new development phase.
