Global warming is caused by air pollution in the atmosphere that is similar to a sheet or a shield, in that the pollution is trapping heat and warmth from the sun. When the atmosphere is full of pollution, there is a constant wrap around the planet trapping heat. The constant heating of the planet has caused temperatures on Earth to increase at the fastest rates ever recorded! In a scientific term, global warming is often written as "climate change", although climate change and global warming are the same concern. Due to global warming, the temperature of the Earth rises, air and water currents move heat that will cool some areas of land or heat other areas of land. The Earth does not always become warmer during climate change. How can you do it? Going green is actually easier than you think. Every little thing that you do every day can be helpful for reducing greenhouse gases, reducing our carbon footprints, and conserving the environment. We should think of saving the earth as our privilege and not just our responsibility. Trees help to remove carbon dioxide from the environment and reduce greenhouse effects. Trees also help landscape to fight against soil erosion due to floods and wind. Trees provide food, shelter, shade and clean air for the atmosphere, making the earth cooler and sustainable. 7.
