Suffice it to say, though, that when we translate techne as either art or craft or skill, we're getting only a small, usually misleading piece of the puzzle. The situation isn't necessarily any better when we combine those translations since, as in the case of art and craft, they can contradict each other. Modernism and Postmodernism. It is aimed at undergraduate students who wish to be able to place (particularly) English and Irish literary prose into a broader intellectual / historical context. I offer no literary examples of any of the features that I describe and would. As a result, Modernist writing usually focuses on how reality seems to the individual consciousness of the main character as he / she experiences the world from moment-to-moment. Postmodern ideas about art and philosophy are similar in some ways to those in Modernism: the human self is complex language is problematic truth, knowledge' and meaning are relative. understanding writing as a useful, teachable art.
