Why digital literacies in the language classroom? What has this got to do with language teaching, you may be asking yourself. Well, everything. Quite apart from the emphasis put on lifelong learning and the acquisition of ICT skills in all areas of education in many countries in Europe, we are teachers of the language of global communication. These literacies come to the forefront in social networking spaces and other online media. They may include blogs and wikis, as well as social networks such as Facebook. In this way we can make a difference in our learners' comfort level, helping them beyond the 'tech comfy' to the 'tech savvy' which will contribute to their life beyond the classroom, in the professional workplace and in our (increasingly) knowledge-based economies.

This fall, American teachers are considering that very question. muffle v. to decrease the noise made by (something). distinguish v. to notice or recognize a difference between people or things. specific adj. special or particular. superhero n. a fictional character who has amazing powers (such as the ability to fly). But what really makes a good teacher? There are a lot of things to consider when answering this question. Below we will discuss the top 10 qualities of a good teacher that we believe are most important when it comes to quality teaching and really creating that strong student-teacher relationship.

1. Communication Skills. This way, a teacher can easily prepare the necessary material for the next class, and will also know exactly where he or she left off. Poor organization could potentially lead to educational waste, and a waste of time. Teachers can do this by expressing and maintaining a list of classroom learning standards.
9. Kid Friendly Teaching Environment. Having a kid friendly teaching environment in your classes is truly a must. My teacher teaches the rest of the day and then goes home (or back into the cabinet in the back of the room). Must be nice to be done at 3 p.m., I have practice and then homework when I get home! What Teachers Do in Real Life: 5 a.m.: Alarm goes off. I'm trying to exercise before work because I'm so tired by the end of the day. 7 a.m. She's very upset and asked if she could eat lunch with me today. Tyrell didn't say a word in class today. I really need to make an effort to connect with every student every day. I just need more time. Lunch
