Particularly in genres such as historical fiction and fantasy, clothing can help to create other worlds (or a long gone era of our own). Here, for example, Hilary Mantel describes a Cardinal's residence being plundered by the King's men in 1529 England, in her historical novel Wolf Hall (2009). Mantel describes the cardinal's vestments. The details create an authentic sense of a prominent cardinal's dress in the 1500s. Dressed in Fiction traces the deployment of dress in key fictional texts of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, from Defoe's Roxana to Hardy's Tess of the D'Urbervilles and Edith Wharton's House of Mirth. Covering a range of topics, from the growth of the middle classes and the association of luxury with vice, to the reasons why wedding dresses rarely ever symbolize h Dressed Dressed in Fiction.
