Nostalgia, home and belonging are interconnected concepts that are difficult to fully capture in any conventional definition. Though a number of critical theories have emerged around the notions of home and belonging as viewed within the diasporic framework, virtually little focus has centred on the way these identities are constituted and contested, particularly within the fictional context. In this paper, I wish to discuss the place of nostalgia in diaspora writing and its significance in creating a sense of home and belonging for the diasporic protagonist. I would like to examine these conc Based on the proceedings of an international conference by the Marie Curie Initial Training Network CoHaB, this volume undertakes to shift the focus to phenomena of home-making and the articulation of a sense of belonging in diasporic contexts. Contributors from a broad range of disciplines discuss a variety of historical and geographical instances of diasporas, exploring the methodological and theoretical challenges posed by the subjects of 'home' and 'belonging'. Including an interview with Homi K. Bhabha on these subjects and the place of theory in diaspora studies as we Find. Advanced. Diasporic Constructions of Hom Holdings. Cite this. Stable concepts of home and belonging have become the exception rather than the rule. Academic engagements with diaspora, too, have long attended more to the notion of dispersal rather than settlement. This book widens the traditional focus of diaspora studies by extending it to the diasporic construction of home and belonging. This book is currently unavailable. 891 printed pages. We are now in the final stages of our large research project, CoHaB (Diasporic Constructions of Home and Belonging), which is funded by the Marie Curie Initial Training Network. In April, we are hosting an innovative Summer School for all the Early Stage Researchers working on the project. Centre for Migration & Diaspora Studies / Jan 2015. I looked for places in London which were classified by the Home Office as having had riots, and in some of them they were very serious confrontations, but in other places they were effectively ghost riots "almost literally fictions of the Home Office in its typologies and taxonomies.
