Flipped classroom is a blended learning teaching model where students need to get acquainted with some theory, watch a video or study new vocabulary on their own. But it's not only about creating a video lecture and asking students to study some grammar points. What happens next is that during the class, you focus more on production, using new language structures and engaging students in the content. Classroom time becomes more effective. My experience showed me that through introducing Flipped Classroom I allowed learners to take control of their learning process. They could study a new language on their own and watch some videos at their own pace. Additionally, it ensured that students had more exposure to the language outside the classroom. By Jonathan Bergmann and Aaron Sams. Ratings The idea of the flipped classroom is really quite simple. Direct instruction is done through video, or some other digital learning object, which students can individually use before they come to class. This time shift allows the teacher to use class time for work that is either better done as a large group or requires individualized attention by the teacher. channel E-Learning English ESL flipped learning grammar lesson Students subscribe youtube.
