Description:

As occupational therapy celebrates its centennial in 2017, attention returns to the profession's founding belief in the value of therapeutic occupations as a way to remediate illness and maintain health. The founders emphasized the importance of establishing a therapeutic relationship with each client and designing an intervention plan based on the knowledge about a client's context and environment, values, goals, and needs. Using today's lexicon, the profession's founders proposed a vision for the profession that was occupation based, client centered, and evidence based--the vision articulated in the third edition of the Occupational Therapy Practice Framework:

Domain and Process.

The Framework is a must-have official document from the American Occupational Therapy Association. Intended for occupational therapy practitioners and students, other health care professionals, educators, researchers, payers, and consumers, the Framework summarizes the interrelated constructs that describe occupational therapy practice. In addition to the creation of a new preface to set the tone for the work, this new edition includes the following highlights: a redefinition of the overarching statement describing occupational therapy's domain; a new definition of clients that includes persons, groups, and populations; further delineation of the profession's relationship to organizations; inclusion of activity demands as part of the process; and even more up-to-date analysis and guidance for today's occupational therapy practitioners.

Achieving health, well-being, and participation in life through engagement in occupation is the overarching statement that describes the domain and process of occupational therapy in the fullest sense. The Framework can provide the structure and guidance that practitioners can use to meet this important goal.

The "Occupational Therapy Practice Framework: Domain and Process", an authorized essay of the American Occupational Therapy Association, provides a comprehensive view of different aspects of participation. According to the "Framework", participation in occupations consists of the following 8 life domains: social participation, work, education, Instrumental Activities Of Daily Living (IADLs), Activities Of Daily Living (ADLs), rest and sleep, leisure, and play [1]. The Comparative Content Review of the Persian Participation Assessment Measures: A Systematic Review. Occupational Therapy*. Patient Care / methods*. Professional Practice / trends*. Professional Role*. Treatment Outcome. Occupational therapy has been in the process of continued development since the 1900s. With several contributors helping to build the groundwork for creating the awareness needed to bring occupational therapy into the field of health care. Continued research is contributing to the ongoing significance of how occupational therapy is a vital aspect in promoting increased independences in all aspects of healthcare. Clinical Situation A clinical situation that has taken place that has enabled me to incorporate the "Occupational Therapy Practice Framework Domain and Process (3rd Ed.)" (AOTA, 2014) into my approach was when an individual that has had a car accident during an ice storm. We will refer to this individual as Jane. The newly updated Occupational Therapy Practice Framework: Domain and process, 3rd edition, otherwise known as the Framework-III is an important document provided by the American Occupational Therapy Association, and all therapists and students should be intimately familiar with it. Figuratively. Only figuratively. I have slept with it though. Literally, in OT school, I fell asleep with the first edition more than once. That's why they called me Miss OTPF. We had a Miss OTPF pageant too, but the opposite of occupation-based in true parody style!
