The Front Room is a unique study by author Michael McMillan of the position of the home in different migrant groups. McMillan draws upon memories of his relatives' homes in the 1960s and 1970s to show a representation of his vision of the traditional 'West Indian' 'front room' or living room. McMillan examines how these rooms raise the issues of class, migration, aspiration, religion, alienation, family and the transition from the colonial to the post-colonial. The front room often provides an outlet to respond to the feelings of displacement, exile and alienation and the rebuilding of a home in a strange land.

The Front Room discusses the groundings of the front room in Victoriana and colonialism, with memories from first-generation West Indians and second-generation Black British. Primarily concerned with the West Indian front room the book expands to Moroccan, Surinamese, Antillean and Indonesian migrant groups and diasporas, the decoration of their interiors and their position throughout decolonisation.

With text from leading cultural theorist Stuart Hall and photographs from living rooms/lounges of the time, installations by artists on the theme of the living room and photos of associated objects, this book presents a unique discussion of cultural studies.

Our aim is to highlight our wealth of local talent as we invite you into their studio, back bedroom or front room " wherever the art happens. The Trail is a unique opportunity to talk to artists about their work, materials and creative process. Most artists on the Trail exhibit a significant body of work with much being available to purchase. Our artists cover every conceivable medium, craft and skill, so there's no shortage of incredible art to explore. It is a unique chance for visitors to peek behind the The results suggest that Room Attendants negotiate the front-of-house and back-of-house boundary through objects " such as the guest room and articles belonging to the guest " and aspects of self " such as impression management, safety, socialising and self-responsibility for room checking. Front-of-the-house space, as the front-stage of the service environment, is where interaction with hotel guests occurs and therefore service impression is required (Boon, 2007). For example, to qualify for a front-stage space and to conform to guest expectations, the décor must look a certain way. This study is the first attempt to empirically and explicitly connect organizational aesthetics to well-being and identifies a novel way to enhance the well-being of the hospitality workforce. View. I am trying to migrate from Sqlite to Room but I am getting a migration error, I believe it is due to the fact that I used VARCHAR() (I followed a guide, definitely wish I would have just used TEXT, but can't fix that now).
