6. How would feel about that?

Must business people leave their Christian values at church? While many business people have a strong and growing interest in the relationship between work and spirit, few find the church to be a resource in their explorations. How can businesspeople live out their faith at work? And how can the church respond more effectively to business people's needs? Church on Sunday, Work on Monday takes the "spirituality at work" movement to the next level, offering practical advice on how businesspeople can find and develop better resources within Christian communities. In this interview about their book Church on Sunday, Work on Monday: The Challenge of Fusing Christian Values with Business Life, HBS senior research fellow Nash explains why. by Martha Lagace, Senior Editor, HBS Working Knowledge. Laura Nash.Â There is truly a need for self-challenge. There is a sense that we must improve the fundamental actions of business in a global setting at the moment. Capitalism looks like it has won the day, but if it suffers from some kind of moral bankruptcy, it isn't going to last. Must business people leave their Christian values at church? While many business people have a strong and growing interest in the relationship between work and spirit, few find the church to be a resource in their explorations.
