Description:

As occupational therapy celebrates its centennial in 2017, attention returns to the profession's founding belief in the value of therapeutic occupations as a way to remediate illness and maintain health. The founders emphasized the importance of establishing a therapeutic relationship with each client and designing an intervention plan based on the knowledge about a client's context and environment, values, goals, and needs. Using today's lexicon, the profession's founders proposed a vision for the profession that was occupation based, client centered, and evidence based--the vision articulated in the third edition of the Occupational Therapy Practice Framework:

Domain and Process.

The Framework is a must-have official document from the American Occupational Therapy Association. Intended for occupational therapy practitioners and students, other health care professionals, educators, researchers, payers, and consumers, the Framework summarizes the interrelated constructs that describe occupational therapy practice. In addition to the creation of a new preface to set the tone for the work, this new edition includes the following highlights: a redefinition of the overarching statement describing occupational therapy's domain; a new definition of clients that includes persons, groups, and populations; further delineation of the profession's relationship to organizations; inclusion of activity demands as part of the process; and even more up-to-date analysis and guidance for today's occupational therapy practitioners.

Achieving health, well-being, and participation in life through engagement in occupation is the overarching statement that describes the domain and process of occupational therapy in the fullest sense. The Framework can provide the structure and guidance that practitioners can use to meet this important goal.

The "Occupational Therapy Practice Framework: Domain and Process", an authorized essay of the American Occupational Therapy Association, provides a comprehensive view of different aspects of participation. According to the "Framework", participation in occupations consists of the following 8 life domains: social participation, work, education, Instrumental Activities Of Daily Living (IADLs), Activities Of Daily Living (ADLs), rest and sleep, leisure, and play [1]. The Comparative Content Review of the Persian Participation Assessment Measures: A Systematic Review. 2 Occupational Therapy Practice Framework: Domain and Process Final Text Prior to Publication Occupational therapy is an evolving profession. Over the years, the study of human occupation and its components has enlightened the profession about the core concepts and constructs that guide occupational therapy practice. In addition, occupational therapy's role and contributions to society have continued to evolve. The Occupational Therapy Practice Framework: Domain and Process (also referred to in this document as the Framework) is the next evolution in a series of documents that have been developed. The Occupational Therapy Practice Framework: Domain and Process, 3rd edition (hereinafter referred to as "the Framework"), is an official document of the American Occupational Therapy Association (AOTA). Intended for occupational therapy practitioners and students, other health care professionals, educators, researchers, payers, and consumers, the Framework presents a summary of interrelated constructs that describe occupational therapy practice. Definitions. Within the Framework, occupational therapy is defined as the therapeutic use of everyday life activities (occupations) with individ-u
