Teachers use four patterns of practice to involve students in meaningful, functional, and genuine language-learning activities: literature focus units, literature circles, reading and writing workshops, and thematic units. 3. Literature Focus Units Teachers and students read and respond to one text together as a class or in small groups. They use the six language arts as they participate in activities and demonstrate learning. Although content-area textbooks may be used, they are only one resource. Students also identify topics they want to study, so thematic units are authentic learning opportunities.

The text also offers practical best practices for differentiating instruction. My students are unanimously positive semester after semester. Eileen Kaiser, Northern Illinois University.
